4	Why do so many people fear spiders? Perhaps they don't know that most spiders are harmless. Even if spiders bite, their venom and fangs are usually not strong enough to hurt. In fact, spiders help people by eating insects. If it were not for spiders, insects would eat almost everything. There are more than 30,000 kinds of spiders. They are found all over the world. Most are quite small — less than one centimeter long. But some have bodies more than 7.6 centimeters (3 in.) in length, with legs spreading even farther.
5	Most spiders live on land. They live on the ground, on plants, in burrows, and on trees. A few spiders can live underwater in ponds and streams. They carry air bubbles on the hairs of their bodies and build cocoons to store the air. Other spiders live on top of the water. They run across the water when they hunt.
